Newsflash!

by Sandra Elsmar

Bill and I were so excited about our vacation to Arizona that we couldn't sleep so we left my Dad's house in Ventura County at 3:30am and headed south to get through the San Fernando Valley before the early morning traffic jam going into Los Angeles.

We were driving down Interstate 5 at 4:30am in my van, towing our little boat, on our way to Highway 210 to go east to Quartzite, Arizona.

It was dark and clear with stars shining. I saw the lights of L.A. over the hills in front of us turn into a huge flash.

Suddenly the van started swaying and bouncing wildly and Bill realized we were feeling an earthquake!

The lights over the hill kept flashing wildly and the freeway sign in front of us was being jolted from side to side. I thought it was going to be uprooted.

Bill coasted the van to a stop at the side of the freeway and we sat there for what seemed like a long time as the van kept hunching and rolling and the lights over the hill kept flashing and going dark like a huge lightning display.

Finally, a minute or so later, the movement slowed to a low rumble and there was only blackness as the power went out in the valley.

All I could say was "Wow" over and over.

Then the cars that were still driving started to slow down and stop and a huge grey cloud came toward us down the hill. I thought it was smoke but then realized it was a dust cloud.

Bill waited for an opening and made a u-turn across the freeway and we followed two other cars to the north along the divider against the oncoming traffic. We knew that if we didn't get out of there right then we would be trapped as the cars and trucks continued to stack up in the south bound lanes.

I tuned the radio to the only station on the air (there is usually a choice of 25 or more) and they began to announce the extent of the damage from the 6.6 quake we had just felt.

We soon learned that we had been about 15 miles from the epicenter of the earthquake. Luckily, I had to stop and use the restroom a few minutes before or we would have been in a much worse situation. The cloud of dust had come from a portion of the freeway that collapsed just ahead of where we were.

We were so lucky to get out of there when we did thanks to Bill's quick thinking and good driving.

We were hoping for some excitement on this trip but that was ridiculous.

Both being natives of Southern California we are used to tremors but was by far the most awesome earthquake either of us ever felt.

We've decided to avoid that area at all costs on our way home!

That's all for today from DFZ Eyewitness news, San Fernando Valley, California.

City Council Special Session By Evan Kramer

The Port Orford City Council met in special session on Tuesday night, January 18, to deal with the Hubbard Creek water issue and an engineering plan for a short stretch of road on Coast Guard Hill.

Mayor Delaine Kennedy gaveled the meeting to order at 7:00pm. Present were councilmen Todd Smith, Gary Doran, George Kennedy, Tim Sparks, Carl Eskelson and Jim Gray. Also present was city manager Dean Madison and city attorney Lynn Heusinkveld from Coos Bay.

The reason for the extra meeting was in case Ernie Bussmann or his lawyer hadn't responded positively to the city's request

Computer FAX

We really work our fax machine and I've always noticed that we have more trouble communicating with computers than with dedicated fax machines. On the other hand, I have a FAX/modem so it was only natural to give it a try. Up till now, I haven't been impressed.

Most faxes we send are filled-in forms, handwritten notes, drawings, etc. which must be typed or scanned before a computer could send them. This is more trouble than it's worth!. Even when the data was already in the computer, the programs I tried were slow and clumsy, requiring conversion before a document could be sent (if that kind of document could be sent!)

Receiving a fax was even worse. The computer has to be on and the fax software running. With fax software running other programs will run slower, and have less memory (so may not run at all). The risk of a system crash (and lost data) is also increased. No thanks. If you do know when a fax is coming, you can quit whatever you're doing, load the software, receive the fax, quit the fax program, and resume operations. Bummer.

I do try to keep an open mind, however, because things change fast in this industry! Upon the recommendation of my friends, I bought a copy of WinFAX Pro and installed it. I'm in love!

WinFAX Pro is a Windows program and installs itself as a printer driver in Windows. This means that to send any document as a fax you just start your application program - word processor, spreadsheet, whatever - and load (or create) the document to be faxed. Then print the document with WinFAX as the printer. You have a chance to enter the phone number, add a cover sheet, etc. then zip! The document is faxed - no muss, no fuss!

Receiving a fax is still not perfect but it is better. You still have to have the computer on and the software running. BUT, since the software runs under Windows, you can still do other work. Windows is designed to run multiple applications and will manage your memory and keep programs isolated from each other. (I'd still recommend you set up to receive only when you know a fax is coming.) There are some benefits to receiving faxes on the computer. WinFAX Pro includes OCR to "recognize" the fax and turn it back into text. This means that you can receive a document, edit it with your word processor, then fax back a corrected version. With a standard fax machine, you would have to re-type the whole document.

I was a success on my first fax (and every one so far.) I tried sending from both the word processor and desktop publishing program to our dedicated fax and sent a text file from the fax machine back to the computer. I haven't tried sending to other machines yet, so reliability is still a question, but it sure is convenient!

My only suggestion on reliability is to make sure you use top-quality hardware. I went through several modems before I was happy. I suspect (but have no proof) that an external modem is more reliable since it is better shielded from the EMI/RFI generated (and mostly contained) within the computer's cabinet. Most computers use a standard serial port to connect to an external modem but I upgraded mine to a more expensive card that uses 16550 chips to improve reliability at high speeds.

If you're sending us a press release and want to fax it, give us a call at 332-6565 and we'll set up to receive it directly into the computer. (Gives you a better chance of being in the paper since we don't have to do as much typing.) If you want to proof an ad or other artwork before printing and have a fax machine, give us the number and we can zip it off to you when it's typeset. If you'd like to work these same miracles, we will be happy to order a copy of WinFAX Pro for you for $99.95 (list price $129.00). External 14,400 TurboModem Plus fax/modem $235.00 (other brands are also available.)

Common Release Date

Believe it or not. The movie Jurassic Park which has grossed 340 million dollars in theater tickets sales has not been released to video. The reason I bring this up is every once in a while I get told by someone that it's out on video. I try explaining the common release date to video but not everybody believes.

The common release date is the day on which movies are released to video stores for rental or sale. For instance last year's popular In The Line Of Fire, starring Clint Eastwood and John Malkovich, comes out on video on Wednesday, February 9. This means Blockbuster Video

As to Jurassic Park if your favorite video store is renting copies of it now they're bootlegged, illegal copies. The one thing that could cause some confusion is that stores often delay purchasing minor titles. This store being one of the smaller ones, we don't get every "B" title or "made for TV" movie up front, but we do try to get all the major movie releases on their day of issue (often with several copies.) Minor titles we may add 30-60 days later when they are available at lower cost.

sister's car head on. We witnessed the crash and barely missed being involved ourselves by inches.

A county deputy was on the scene in 35 minutes, as was the Port Orford ambulance.

Later, when we requested a copy of the deputy's report, we were stalled by the sheriff's department. Becoming frustrated, we contacted the district attorney of Curry county, thinking he was in charge of law and would help us. Wrong! When we asked who, then, was in charge, we were told that we the people were in charge. The sheriff is an elected official. Back to where we started.

Result, we hired an attorney, who finally on November 30, 1993, received a reply from the sheriff's department and an amended copy of the deputy's accident report. It contained a drawing of the scene. The report was faulty. It contained two statements allegedly given at the scene. Neither party gave such statements. The time frame cited did not jibe with the actual happenings and a crudely drawn map was wrong. The AMENDED report contained misspelled names, words, and lack of proper capitalization.

To our knowledge no citations were ever issued and the case is now closed.

How can those left behind set aside their grief for a loved one, when our local law enforcement does not even acknowledge that our sister was killed by a driver of a truck who admits he fell asleep, crossed the center double yellow line and hit our sister's car head on?

Who is in charge and why? Frustrated with county law enforcement in Curry county, we respectfully submit this letter.

Commissioners Select McMullen

The Curry County Board of Commissioners met Monday, Jan. 10, to select a person to fill a vacancy on the Port Orford Rural Fire Board. Commissioners Rocky McVay (chairman) and Peg Reagan convened the meeting at 11:30am with commissioner Terry Hanscam absent. They heard from county counsel Gerry Heritage on the legalities of the situation. Several documents including letters were introduced as evidence. Chairman McVay then opened the meeting to the public and several people spoke in favor of one or the other of the people whose names had been submitted to the commissioners. They included Frank Barrows and Bill McMullen.

At the end of the public testimony commissioner Reagan made a motion nominating Bill McMullen to fill the vacancy. The motion was seconded by McVay and by a 2-0 vote McMullen was appointed to the position. His term of office extends through June 30, 1995.
