It's Fair Time

By Evan Kramer

Last week the Curry County Fair came to a successful conclusion after a four day run at the Event Center at the Beach as the Fairgrounds is now called.

Valerie and I decided to attend the fair before all the flowers wilted and went down to Gold Beach on Thursday afternoon. First we started with something to eat because fairs always make me hungry. After devouring a messy (but very yummy!) barbecue beef and cheese sandwich and curly fries we headed off to the commercial building for a look at the exhibits. The Elk River Fish Hatchery had a very popular booth and hatchery employees Ken Fliszar and Glen White were kept busy answering questions and listening to fish stories. Other booths were busy selling Internet connections, Democratic Party politics and Curry County Home Health Hospice, among other things.

Then it was on to the floral and land products building for a look at what active gardeners are doing in Curry County with their time including growing some awfully nice look flowers and vegetables, from gladiolas to hydrangea, to Walla Walla onions.

It looks like the most popular part of the Curry County Fair is the amusement ride midway. That was the most crowded part of the Fair and everyone seemed to be having a good time. I took a pass on the rides, as my stomach isn't what it used to be. Some time before we moved to Port Orford we attended the Orange County Fair and that was the last time I rode the carnival rides. Besides losing everything in my pockets it made me dizzy so I'll leave that to the younger set.

Then it was on to see the farm animals, which is my main incentive for attending these smaller county fairs. What a shock we had at the livestock and 4-H dormitory building. We walked in and noticed right away the shambles the building was in. Part of the roof was gone and replaced with black tarps, which were billowing in the wind. The wall between the two sections of the building is falling apart and in the larger of the two sections adjacent to the 4-H dormitory the insulation was dangling from the ceiling as it is in the smaller section. In spring of 2000 Curry County voters were given the chance to vote on repairing the building but turned it down.

Fair manager Ron Crook said on Monday afternoon that the fair attendance was up this year and the carnival had the largest ride sale ever. He spoke about the efforts to repair the livestock building and said they needed $250,000 to bring the building back up to standard and were trying to raise $125,000 of that in Curry County. Crook said new fair board member Les Walker, owner of Brookings-Harbor Ford, had donated a Ford Mustang convertible to 4-H and FFA (future farmers of America) for use in a fund raising effort for the building. 4-H and FFA members are selling raffle tickets to win the Mustang. If Mr. Walker can get this building renovated he'll deserve a winning ribbon and a thanks from all of Curry County.

My favorite animals are the chickens because I've had several over the years and the hogs (never had one of those). Then it was time to head back to Port Orford so we didn't get to see Brenda Dell's felting demonstration which was held on Friday in the Docia Sweet Building.

The grand champion exhibitor at this year's Curry County Fair was Port Orford's Kathryn Jamieson-Hazard. She had the most points earned with her winning entries in a variety of departments (including Walla Walla onions). Kathryn received a myrtlewood clock and a $100 cash prize provided by fair sponsor Gerald Ross Insurance Agency. Congratulations!

The Coos County Fair and Rodeo opens on Wednesday August 8 and runs through Sunday August 12. The Fair is held in beautiful downtown Myrtle Point and is well worth the 50-mile ride from Port Orford to get there. General admission prices vary from opening day and Thursday ($6 for adults and children 6-12 $3) to Friday and Saturday when admission prices go up $1 and then Sunday, which is Family Day, and prices are $5 and $2. The rodeo is free with admission on Friday and Saturday nights but reserved box seats are available for $15. Brenda Dell and her grandson Justin will participate in that fair with several of their llamas so if you attend stop by and say hello. Brenda is the assistant leader for the 4-H club The Llameros.

There are main arena performances on Wednesday and Thursday nights including Blessed Union of the Soul on Wednesday at 8:00pm and Chely Wright on Thursday at 8:00pm. Tickets for these two performances are $15 and include entrance to the Fair.

Other county fairs coming up soon are the Douglas County Fair August 7-11 and the Lane County Fair August 21-26. The Oregon State Fair in Salem will be held August 23 through September 3. We've attended the State Fair several times and it's well worth the drive to the State Capitol. My favorite part of that large Fair is the commercial exhibits of which there are hundreds. I enjoy the performances many of the vendors give and have been known to fall for some of their spiels and gone home with a collection of knives or other semi useless gee gas. If you can't get to these in person, we'll be happy to rent you the musical, "State Fair" at The Downtown Fun Zone. We might even sell you a gee ga!

New Doors Installed

The next emergency exit doors for the Port Orford Community Building were installed on Friday, July 27. The Port Orford Rotary Club was in charge of installing the door and four of its members participated in the project. John Johnston, Doug Jamieson, Frank Smith and Al Affonso began by working on removing the old rusted doors. The group started work at 8:30am and finished up at 3:30pm. They donated over eighteen hours of labor to the project and now the building finally has a set of working emergency exit doors. The City of Port Orford received $1520 in donations, which paid for the new doors and everyone who donated deserves a big thanks. Thanks also to the Port Orford Rotary Club and all the help they've been on behalf of the Community Building upgrade including installing the doors and putting in the insulation on the interior walls.

Ancient Ceremony By Graeme Graydon

I attended the annual ceremony at the Port – the Blessing of the Fleet. The morning was beautiful, bright and almost windless for the large crowd gathered at the Fishermen's Memorial. It was a simple affair, the haunting dirge of a lone piper, a word of welcome, a poem of tribute to the sea, a song and a prayer – but it was enough to give pause and allow a space for seldom visited thoughts to come to the mind. I found connection to the countless ceremonies, made all over the world, ever since humans first ventured out onto the sea, ceremonies that looked different but somehow always addressed the same three issues. The first is a private and public admission of our fear of the relentless ocean, her unpredictability and danger, her allure to those she calls, (who must be ever mindful of her capricious ways,) for who can trust her. The second element is to admit how fragile we are, how powerless we seem, how vulnerable our fisherfolk are to her ways.

And the third element – that from this awareness of our impotence, we turn to a Higher Power to find some comfort, some certainty, something to trust in the face of such uncertainty. For the traveler it's a lot like getting a passport which calls for the safe passage of the bearer, but cannot guarantee that safe passage will be granted.

I looked out over the graceful sweep of the southern coastline and was drawn back to memories of my own – of ships lost, lives lost and the miracle of lives saved. I realized that my love affair with the sea is a powerful one, she was around me every day of my younger years, my vacations were all spent at Titahi Bay, I played and played in her, she was a large part of my world – but always tempered with the cautions of my elders. Look out for stingrays, keep an eye open for a dorsal fin all the time, watch out for an undertow, count heads and don't swim right after lunch – I could get a cramp and drown. I loved her, she could take my life so easily, and yet I loved her.

This is a day and an age when we expect all frontiers to fall before the steady onslaught of science and technology. It is a good thing to remember that we haven't mastered much at all – beginning with the sea – she has never been tamed, she is a force we cannot contain. To go to her without respect, to crowd her coastlines with our houses or use her as a dump – is to court her rage. In a curious parallel, we think that we have mastered the skies as well as the sea. A sobering adage goes; There are old pilots and bold pilots, but no old, bold pilots. The skies, like the seas, are not our natural element. To forget that, if only for a moment, is to court disaster.

And so, the Blessing of the Fleet, a plea for safe passage on the sea, continues to be profoundly meaningful to those who know her. Perhaps respect for her is close to a reverence which is never spoken about but is seen by the way a fisherman prepares his vessel for her, by how he watches and reads her mood as he heads out, and how quickly he changes his wishes to meet her demands.

Garden Needs Help

The Butterfly/Hummingbird Garden in Buffington Park needs some weeding and mulching on Thursday, August 2, at 1:00pm. Bring garden tools. We want the Butterfly/Hummingbird Garden to look lovely for the big weekend. Won't you help? An hour or two of your time would make a big difference. Everybody is welcome. The more the merrier. For more information, directions to the garden, or to make a much needed cash donation, call Paula Cracas at 332-1945.

Virus Warning By Valerie Jean Kramer

There are a couple of computer viruses running around that you should be aware of. I've seen a lot of press about the Code Red virus but haven't gotten one myself yet. (I don't want one either!)

Of more interest is the Sircam virus (or worm, a distinction of interest only to tekkies.) It's a particularly bad one. Like most of them these days, it sends itself out to everyone in your address book so don't think you're safe because it came from someone you know. It is more difficult to remove than some so there's all the more reason to not get it in the first place. The worst fact about it is that currently Norton Anti-Virus (and possibly others) won't always catch it when you receive it! They haven't exactly made this clear on their web site but the information is available in their message forum boards. They hope to fix this soon but it means you can't depend on your anti-virus software either. You'd better be able to recognize the thing by yourself!

First off, the message will have an attached file. In all the ones I've received, there have been two files - one containing the virus and another *.txt file which I'm told may be empty. Don't open either one!!! The subject of the message will be the name of the attached file. In messages I've seen, there may be some minor variation like the subject may show just the file name but not the extension. I.e: if the file is "password.doc", the subject may just be "password". Just looking at the message title you won't yet know that it's infected with Sircam. The text of the message is distinct though. It goes something like this:

"Hi, how are you?"

I send you this file in order to have your advice

See you later. Thanks"

This may be in English or Spanish and there are other variants so check the Symantec website (<http://www.symantec.com> or other trusted authority on virus info) for complete details.

Finally, you can bet there will be copycats who can't write their own code but can monkey with someone else's. We'll probably see lots more like this one in the future. Good luck!

Senior News
By Mary Yoder

July 26 was Rotary luncheon. Volunteers working were Lorraine Hass, Mary Evans, Kay Neal – setting up the dining room Mark Murry, Chris Lozano – doing dishes and lots of other things Mark Murry, Chris Lozano, Warren Jewell. While I was in the office our president Owen Miller came in. He told me his daughter Jackie and her son Zachary, Owen’s grandson just three months old were coming to visit him. He was very excited so I asked him when. Said August 6 so bet we see him and his grandson at the Center. He will be here a week. Best come and see him.

July 28 luncheon – volunteers working were Jane Black, Marge Kyle, Nancy Dowdy, Pat Dowdy, Mark Murry – all did a fine job. Lot of compliments on the luncheon. Pauline Lenox at the money box – Kay Neal doing the rummage sale. Now I’d like to give a great big thank you to the flower shop for the beautiful flowers. Thank you from all of us.

August 6 Monday night 7:00pm pinochle. August 11 is the luncheon and birthday. There will be no rummage sale until September.

August 12 is the breakfast from 8:30am to 1:00pm. No rummage sale. Bingo at Langlois 6:30pm. Oh by the way did I say this is Owen Miller’s first grandchild. Isn’t that great a grand Daddy?

State Parks Meeting

On Tuesday, August 7, Oregon State Parks personnel will hold a meeting to gather public input on the State Park Master Plan for all parks in Curry County (www.prd.state.or.us), including the Port Orford Heads State Park, home of the Port Orford Lifeboat museum (www.portorfordlifeboatstation.org). The meeting will be held at the Port Orford Senior Center at 7:00pm.

The master plan draft of 1999 is out of date, and the new Director of the State Parks Michael Carrier has mandated that the Parks districts get current public input before the plan is finalized.

Unhappy with the exterior condition of the museum building? Want steps to the boat house rebuilt? Real rest rooms installed? Better signs on the trails? Come and be heard!

There are 17 state park facilities in Curry County totaling 8,947.89 acres or nearly ten percent of the total state park acreage. Four of them including Floras Lake State Natural Area (also known as Blacklock), Cape Blanco State Park, Humbug Mountain State Park and Samuel H. Boardman State Scenic Corridor are over 1,300 acres each.

The Curry County State Parks Master Plan is a summary of the development proposals for these parks. Draft copies of the master plan are available at public libraries in Curry County and available for review at Humbug Mountain State Park.

Keep Oak Disease Out

Sudden Oak Death disease has killed tens of thousands of oak trees in California. Oregon's foresters are asking the public's help to keep that from happening here.

"We don't want it transported by people and people transporting products," Oregon Department of Forestry's (ODF) Kathy Wiggins said, noting that infected oak firewood and other untreated oak products crossing the California border pose a significant threat to Oregon's oak trees.

The fungus has decimated coast live oak, black oak and tanoak trees in seven California counties along a 190-mile range of coastline. Areas of Marin and Santa Cruz counties report up to 80 percent of the forest canopy dead from the Phytophthora ramorum, a kind of brown algae that also occurs in rhododendron, myrtle, madrone and members of the huckleberry family. It does not infect Oregon white oak, the state's most abundant oak tree.

Using "sudden" and "oak" in the same sentence may seem a contradiction in terms, since trees live on a much longer timeline than humans. But in this case, the name is well chosen.

"If you went out to an infested area today, for example, and found several dead trees, and went back to that area in two months," ODF Forest Pathologist Alan Kanaskie said, "you might find several more dead trees that looked totally healthy two months prior to that."

Discovered in 1995 in Mill Valley, California, Sudden Oak Death appears to rot a tree from the inside out. The leaves become mottled, change colors, then fall off. The tree dies soon after. Experts originally thought the disease thrived only in cool, moist, coastal environments. But recent detections in inland regions of the state have raised concerns that drier areas could be at risk as well.

Sudden Oak Death has not been found in Oregon oak trees. To keep the disease outside the state's borders, the Oregon Department of Agriculture (ODA) in January enacted a quarantine that prohibits the importation of oak lumber, firewood, logs, nursery stock and bark chips from Sudden Oak Death-infested California counties. But Oregon has no mechanism in place to enforce the quarantine when it comes to noncommercial movement of quarantined items, Wiggins said, so ODA and ODF are appealing to the public for voluntary compliance.

If the disease does enter Oregon, early detection could prevent its spread.

"If people think that they have infected tanoak or California black oak trees, or those types of trees are starting to look sick or recently died," Wiggins said, "they can contact the local Oregon Department of Forestry office or Oregon State University extension agent."

Kudana Marimba Band

Intricate rhythms and spirited percussive melodies of the Kudana Marimba Ensemble will cap off Port Orford's 150th birthday celebration when the North Curry Community Health Grant brings the eclectic Eugene group to the community building, from 7:00 to 9:00pm, on Saturday, August 4.

Cathy Boden, grant program coordinator, invites the public to hear the group's traditional and original pieces "that just invite you to get up and dance."

Kudana means "to love one another." Inspired by the Shona people of Zimbabwe, Kudana was formed to remind Oregonians of the harmonies of the Earth, Air, Fire, and Water," and that we must co-exist on this planet together," according to a group spokesman.

Letter To The Editor,

This letter goes out to all the people in this community, who not only helped with the Blessing of the Fleet. (Port Orford Fishermen's Memorial 7-28-01 Port Orford dock), but too those of you that were able to attend this ceremony.

For those that forgot, or those that just couldn't get away. The weather was surprisingly bearable, the view, like always, outstanding, and for those of us that have soft hearts. The beautiful arrangements of cut flowers, music, the reading of poems, the prayers that were given, and of course the way the lyrics were presented to the song Amazing Grace were needlessly to say, a tear jerker. As far as all of the food on the tables, there was all the usual fish and shellfish that Port Orford's little fleet captures, like Salmon, Sablefish, Halibut, Ground fish, Tuna, Dungeness Crab. There was shrimp, Oyster shooters, Dips, Spreads, Soups, a lot of other seafood dishes as well. (You ladies really out did you selves again.)

I for one felt over whelmed with the support of the people of this little town of Port Orford. If I didn't share my thanks to all of you then, I wish to publicly share my appreciation to all of those that did give up there talented time.

Letter to the Editor,

As a child, I was taught to honor our elders and those who came before us. Giving recognition to the last century and a half settlement in Port Orford only fulfills part of this obligation. To exclusively say "150 Years of History", is overlooking thousands of years of sovereignty by this regions original inhabitants. I would like to ask the community of Port Orford, while in remembrance of the past, to also remember the indigenous people who lived here long before us.

Thank you,

Rick Cook

Women's Time Out

Women of all ages are invited to the Wednesday Women's Time Out "Fashion Bouquet" dinner on Monday, August 6 at 6:30 p.m. at Bandon Face Rock Golf Course, 3235 Beach Loop Dr., Bandon. Tickets are $8.00 inclusive at the door.

Water Quality Meeting

The Curry SB1010 Local Advisory Committee (LAC) is working on an Agricultural Water Quality Management Plan and will hold it's regular meeting at 7:00 p.m. Wednesday, August 8 in the OSU Extension Office, at the Fairgrounds in Gold Beach. Public input is welcome and encouraged. If you own land in Curry County this plan could effect you.

The committee is made up of 15 Curry County residents, representing different agricultural factions throughout the County. The committee has representatives for the beef industry, sheep industry, lily bulb growers, cranberry growers, nurseries, fisheries, small landowners, watershed councils, Soil and Water Conservation District (SWCD) and environmental concerns.

New Police Officer

Brain Coady is Port Orford's newest Police Department Reserve Officer. He was recently sworn in by City Recorder La Rae Liston. Brian is a long time resident of the Port Orford area who has been training with the City's Police Department for some time. He has already ridden over 200 hours, and will continue his training with the department.

Brian will be graduating from the SWOCC Reserve Officer training program later this year. Once he has completed all of his training work with the Port Orford Police Department he will have all the powers of any other police officer. Until then Brian will continue learning the ropes - riding with Chief Rush and Officer Arneson; studying policies and procedures, and working in the Police Dept. Office at City Hall. Chief Rush says that Brian is a real asset to the department.
